Senate majority leader drops out of court search

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton's Supreme Court search team scrambled Tuesday as Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell abruptly withdrew from consideration. Mitchell said he was concerned taking the job might hurt his chances of health care reform during this year.

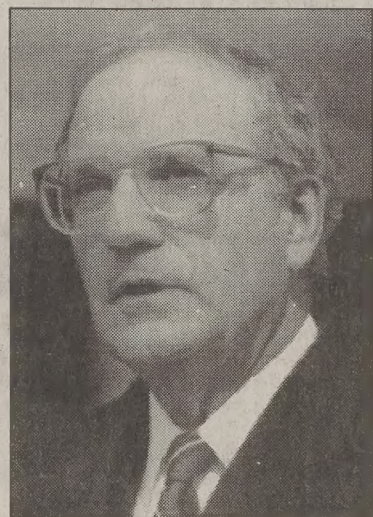

Mitchell said Clinton had told him Monday night he was inclined to nominate the 60-year-old Maine legislator for the vacancy created by Justice Harry A. Blackmun's retirement.

Mitchell said Clinton "reluctantly" cited his assessment that he might not be able to undergo the grueling confirmation process and keep his promise to shepherd health care reform through the Senate this year.

Mitchell served briefly as a federal judge in his native Maine, and his political skills were viewed as an important asset on a court narrowly divided on many controversial issues. Clinton accepted Mitchell's judgment that nomination now "would have had an adverse impact on their shared agenda," said White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers.

U.S. District Judge Jose Cabranes of Connecticut was said to be high on Clinton's list, and the favorite of the advisers who want Clinton to name the first Hispanic to the Supreme Court. Solicitor General Drew W. Lewis III is another contender, as are at least two federal appeals judges, Richard Arnold of Texas and Amalya Kearse of New York.

They were described as the "most promising" prospects from a list of a dozen compiled by Clinton's search team. Administration officials said it was possible Clinton could suggest or request new names, and not out of the question that he might look for another political figure.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said last week he did not want to be considered, and Education Secretary Richard Riley made the same request last year. Both Babbitt and Riley are former governors. New York Gov. Mario Cuomo was the early favorite when Clinton was filling his first high court vacancy a year ago, but he also bowed out of contention.

Speaking to reporters on Capitol Hill, Mitchell said Clinton had "reluctantly accepted" his decision. Mitchell said Congress had "a rare opportunity" to enact "comprehensive, meaningful health care reform and I don't want to do anything to detract from that."

Foreigners flee Rwandan capital city

Associated Press

KIGALI, Rwanda — Amid the crash of mortar fire, French and Belgian paratroopers evacuated the last large group of foreign refugees Tuesday as a major rebel force began pushing into Kigali from the north.

With the advance of the rebels, tensions in the capital were extremely high. A trip through the outskirts gave the impression of an entire city primitively at arms.

The roadsides were lined with Hutu men, some dressed in new warm winter coats apparently looted from stores, others barefoot and armed with clubs, machetes, axes and makeshift spears and bows-in-arrow.

"They are afraid of the rebels and I don't blame them," said Guy Steimes, a Belgian businessman. "The rebels call themselves the Rwandan Patriotic Front, but they'll probably start killing Hutus, just like the presidential guard killed Tutsis."

A reporter saw six fresh corpses with slash wounds along a road from the airport.

An estimated 20,000 people have been slain in a week of violence.

Ten Belgian soldiers taking part in a U.N. peace-keeping operation died during the first day of fighting, which was sparked by a plane crash Wednesday at Kigali's airport that killed the presidents of Rwanda and Burundi.

Six Belgian civilians and at least three French also have been killed.

The dispute really is decades-long, reflecting the enmity between the Hutus who dominate the government and comprise 90 percent of the country's 8.5 million people and the Tutsis, who make up 9 percent of the population.

Two rebel battalions of about 500 men each pushed into Kigali late Tuesday and had the airport nearly surrounded.

One group moved east and then south of the airport, as the other tried to cut off the main road running west from the airport to the city. They hadn't succeeded by nightfall, said Col. Marc Emonts-Gast, a Belgian military spokesman.

Mortar and recoil-less rifle blasts shook the airport all afternoon. The airport has been turned into an operating base for French and Belgian troops, as well as journalists. French TV journalists slept Tuesday night on conveyor belts at the international check-in desk.

U.N. spokesman Joe Sills in New York said the rebels and government forces have agreed in writing not to interfere with the evacuation of foreigners.

Sills and other officials were unable to confirm reports that members of the interim government had fled a hotel in Kigali where they had holed up for days.

The mostly Hutu army was pushed back at several points along a front running east-to-west across the city Tuesday, Belgian military sources said.

One officer said as few as 1,000 organized defenders remained in the capital. As many as 20,000 rebels were advancing from the north and hundreds more were attacking small groups inside the city.

French and Belgian troops evacuated almost 900 expatriates and other refugees Tuesday.

Students told to become 'one' despite differences

By EMILY SELDEN
Universe Staff Writer

Although members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints are many, they can become "one" by making individual contributions, offering help to the Lord and realizing that they are part of a whole, said Dr. Kate Kirkham in Tuesday's Devotional.

Kirkham, BYU associate professor of organizational behavior, said, "We are one. While we can be ranked, divided, graded and rewarded by secular measures, by a common spiritual measure you and I know each of us is as valued as the person next to us by a just and merciful Savior."

Every member's contribution and gift is needed to make a whole, Kirkham said. Church members tend to minimize the importance of their contributions by thinking of themselves as only one among hundreds of ward members or one among thousands in a community, she said.

Students need to make offerings daily to be of use to the Lord.

Living righteously and showing genuine concern for others are not enough to bring about a oneness, she said.

"Might we be of more use if we repeatedly initiate the request to be of use, even in ways we know not?" Kirkham asked.

She said students can offer to impart attention and encouragement. However, giving others attention does not involve passing judgment, and encouragement needs to be offered even to those who are more talented or materially comfortable than others.

BECOMING ONE: Kate Kirkham, an associate professor of organizational behavior, speaks with students at Tuesday's Devotional in the de Jong Concert Hall. Kirkham told students how to become unified despite their great numbers and diversities.

"When we accept more fully the attention of our Savior to our life, to our every need, when we acknowledge that he knows the desires of our hearts, when we remember to seek first the kingdom of God, we have ample substance to impart," Kirkham said.

The final step toward becoming "one" is believing that all things work together for the benefit of those who love God.

Salt Lake, surrounding communities build in hope of 2002 Olympic bid

(Note: The following is the series of articles looking into the bid to host the 2002 Winter Games.)

By LAEL PALMER
Universe Staff Writer

Following the 1998 Winter Olympic Game bid to Asia, Utah is again bidding to host the 2002 Winter Games in 2002.

If Utah wins the bid, most sports events will likely take place in the city of the Olympic Games — Salt Lake City.

Organizing the Olympics even that far ahead will have both long and short-term effects on surrounding Utah communities.

Concern many residents have is whether or not the communities will have to pay for the massive sports events after the games are over.

The Utah Bid Committee has a budget to begin preparations for the Olympics. Already, Utah communities are making plans and building facilities to be used in the Olympics.

Salt Lake City recently completed an arena intended for the games. The cost is $6.2 million. More than $3 million of that was paid for by the local bid committee. The rest was covered by Weber County and private donations.

Many of the facilities the committee plans on using already exist, said Bob Hunter, public relations coordinator for the committee. These include the Delta Center, Rice Stadium and other facilities at the University of Utah.

"That is our theme," Hunter said. "We are ready. We have the resources to welcome the winter games here."

In the second week of operation, the rink in Ogden is everything everyone expected it to be, said manager Jim Schreiber.

"We have had from 250 to 300 people skating per evening session, and more than that on weekends," Schreiber said. "We have also been renting a lot of time for figure skating and hockey."

Another ice sheet will probably be built in Provo by the end of November, Hunter said. The Provo ice sheet will probably be used for ice skating practice, he said.

Hotel and transportation facilities in Salt Lake City will be improved whether Utah gets the bid or not, Hunter said.

"Salt Lake is growing, especially in the tourism and business areas," Hunter said. "These areas are destined to improve in a city like this."

The bid committee is running its campaign on private donations from individuals and businesses in the area, Hunter said.

"Geneva Steel, the banking community and some of the airlines have been very generous toward our efforts," Hunter said.

Included in the Utah Bid Committee budget is $100 million for the upkeep of the buildings after the games are over. Fifty-nine million will be used to purchase the buildings from the state of Utah, and the rest will be used for upkeep. This money can either be used to dispose of the facilities, to help pay for their upkeep, or to convert them for other uses.

One suggestion made in an earlier bid proposal to help keep down the costs of the facilities was to convert already existing stadiums into facilities that could be used for the Olympics.

Another suggestion made in a study done for the 1994 Winter Games was to convert winter equipment for summer use, so local revenues could keep the facilities out of the black. The study pointed out that an earlier U.S. winter game host city turned their ski jump into a water slide, so it could be used for both winter and summer activities.

The reason Utah lost the bid for the 1994 winter games was timing and geography, Hunter said. When the bid was decided, Atlanta had just been chosen for the summer games and the winter games weren't slated to be in North America again, he said.

The host city will be chosen on June 16, 1995, according to the United States Olympic Committee.

Arizona city copies FHE idea, hopes it will decrease juvenile crime

By DAVID MAXWELL
Universe Staff Writer

Don't plan on going to city council meetings on Monday night in Winslow, Ariz. — there aren't any.

Winslow's mayor and city council issued a statement last Monday night as "family night" in Winslow. Meetings will be held on Monday night, and families are encouraged to spend time together. The program is based on the "family home evening" program of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Concerned about increases in juvenile crime and gang violence, the Winslow Ministerial Alliance agreed to start the program in their congregations and then attached the city with the idea to have a community-family night. The Alliance hopes the attention on the family will counteract juvenile crime.

"I think it's a great idea," said Edgar Miller, pastor of Desert View Baptist Church and Winslow city magistrate. "This is a program that works."

Miller is a member of the Alliance and presented the program to the city council on behalf of the Alliance. The family night program is designed to combat recent increases in juvenile crime, he said.

"We have a lot of family problems in the community because people aren't able to spend time with their children," Miller said. "We hope that by setting one day a week aside to spend time with the family we'll be able to alleviate some of those problems."

The ministers' association approached Dale Patton, stake president of the Winslow, Ariz. Stake, asking for information on the LDS family home evening program. Patton provided them with some manuals and pamphlets describing the program.

"I joined the ministers' association, and in their meetings they were raising concerns about how to keep families together and do things as a family," Patton said.

After providing the ministers with copies of the family home evening manual, Patton let the ministers take control of the program and present the idea to the city council and mayor.

"We've kept a low profile as a Church so there wouldn't be objections to the program based on the fact that it was a Mormon program," he said.

Although there has been some opposition to the program because of its LDS roots, nearly all the ministers are supporting the program, Miller said.

"Just because the LDS Church has been having a family night on Monday night doesn't mean we can't do the same thing," Miller said. "There has been some opposition to this program as a Mormon program, but you're never going to get 100 percent support of anything you do."

Miller said his congregation has responded very well to the program. Miller has canceled all Monday night church meetings and activities and encouraged his congregation to spend time together as a family.

"When we looked at this program, we studied every single night of the week and agreed that Monday night would be the only possible night for everyone to get together," Miller said.

The community program has also increased family home evening participation among the members of the LDS Church.

"We've told our members that if other churches in the community are holding family night, then we'd better make sure we're having it too," Patton said.

Inflation of food and energy prices subsides

WASHINGTON — Wholesale price inflation was in check in March, easing worries a day before a much-anticipated report on consumer prices. The government said steady energy costs helped offset a rise in food prices.

Wholesale prices rose 0.2 percent last month and for the first quarter of 1994 they were up 3.9 percent at an annual rate, the Labor Department said Tuesday. For all of last year, they were up only 0.2 percent.

Economists said that even though some commodity prices rose — with storms and icy weather driving fruit and vegetable prices higher — the overall picture is tranquil.

Bruce Steinberg of Merrill Lynch & Co. said inflation will continue to be tame as long as labor costs stay low.

The Clinton administration hailed the report as further evidence inflation is under control.

Gasoline prices declined 1.8 percent and heating oil was down 0.7 percent. But gas for home heating increased 1.9 percent.

Food prices, down 0.4 percent in February, shot up 0.5 percent last month as the cost of some vegetables and fruits soared.

Lack of funds contributed to prison escape

SALT LAKE CITY — The lack of a backup alarm system, an unstaffed guard tower and a troublesome new electronic security system are to blame for the escapes of three prison inmates, corrections officials say.

On March 28, three inmates escaped the prison by scaling a support beam topped with fencing material, cutting razor wire and climbing atop a building where a motion detection system failed. They got past more razor wire at the top and bottom of a fence and fled.

The trio was captured in Salt Lake City less than 24 hours later.

A lack of funding has contributed to security problems at Utah State Prison, according to a report by Department of Corrections Director Lane McCotter to Gov. Mike Leavitt. Leavitt is reportedly concerned over the budget constraints.

LDS are notorious as Jell-O lovers in U.S.

OGDEN — An executive for Jell-O confirms what many Utahns — especially members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints — have long suspected: The Salt Lake City market craves fruit-flavored gelatin.

Lime Jell-O salads for decades have been a fixture at dinners thrown by the dominant religion's women's auxiliary, the Relief Society, and Latter-day Saints — who shun tobacco and alcohol and have notoriously sweet teeth.

Chris Peddy, assistant product manager for Jell-O brand gelatin, said northern Utah is one of the country's highest per capita users of his product, with about 4 million boxes sold annually. Nationally, the figure is 305 million boxes, sugar-based and sugar-free combined.

Gelatin is derived from animal skins, hooves and bones that are soaked in water.

"It's a naturally derived product," Peddy said. "We don't like to talk about it much."

Local man pays bail, steals car, leaves town

PROVO — Police say they fear an Orem man has fled the state after being bound over to stand trial for the rape of a Provo woman last March.

Carlos Espinal, a 20-year-old Orem man who was living with some relatives, left home Tuesday morning according to Detective Gerald Nielsen of the Orem Police Department.

Espinal's family noticed a car missing early that evening but hadn't reported it stolen until later that night, said Nielsen.

Police say Espinal had appeared in Provo District court Monday.

According to the district court reporter, Judge Hansen found the burden of proof had been met by the state in the hearing, and that Espinal was to be bound over for trial in the rape.

The court reporter said that a court date for Mr. Espinal had not yet been set.

She said that Judge Hansen had set bond at 5,000 dollars at the hearing and the amount had been met by Espinal.

Police say they are still looking for the 1981 Blue Buick Skylark that was stolen Tuesday.

They hope to question Espinal when possible.

Cats linked with deadly virus

Associated Press

SANTA FE — A state health official says cats will be studied to determine if they have a role in spreading a deadly hantavirus to New Mexicans.

"With other hantaviruses, cats have been a risk factor for infection in some studies," Mack Sewell, epidemiologist with the New Mexico Department of Health, said Monday. "But it's unknown the role they play here, whether they help or hurt."

The hantavirus that has been responsible for about a dozen deaths in New Mexico was first recognized last spring in the Four Corners area where New Mexico, Arizona, Utah and Colorado meet. The respiratory illness has killed 41 people in 17 states.

Provo residents stifle care center expansion

By LAEL PALMER
Universe Staff Writer

Provo residents don't want a medical care center to expand into their backyards. Residents of the East Lake Care Center in northwest Provo say they have to turn away an average of four patients per day because of a limited number of beds. The facilities are too small to accommodate the patients who want care there, a hospital representative said in a Provo city council meeting Tuesday.

The care center wants to expand their facilities to include a three story addition and 110 new beds, almost doubling their current capacity. Home owners in the area say that rezoning the area for an expansion would have a negative impact on their neighborhood. They say that the expansion would cause their property values to drop and create parking congestion on their small residential road, endangering the children who live in the area. "We believe the encroachment of East Lake Care Center into our neighborhood will drastically alter the character and atmosphere of our small street," wrote Forrest Hale in a letter to Provo City Council earlier this month.

The residents and care center were able to come to an agreement of a 30-foot setback of the expansion from the road to maintain the atmosphere of the neighborhood. But residents are still concerned that a 3-story building will detract from the residential area, saying that the care center had not been a good neighbor in the past and that the new stories would cause even more parking and noise pollution problems in their neighborhood. Tuesday night, the residents appealed the city council's 5-0 decision from January to allow the expansion. The plans were modified so as not to encourage parking on the narrow street and the zoning was ratified by the city council, 4-1.

1400 AM SUPER radio serves students in the show

By AMY RAE LEMON
and MARNEE MORTENSEN
Universe Staff Writers

1400 AM SUPER, Student Underground Pirated Entertainment Radio, run by college-aged students, broadcasts a college format radio program from midnight until two a.m. on Wednesdays and Friday mornings. "We wanted to clean up the airwaves," said James Bush, 26, a senior in Family Science, decided to start a student station after listening to local radio stations.

"A lot of top 40 soul stations have (the) really bad and you cannot listen to them," Bacorn said. "A lot of the songs they play are against both parents and church standards."

1400 AM SUPER has a modern alternative sound and offers a variety of music that cannot be heard anywhere else in Provo.

"We play good fun music without any bad," Bush said.

One advantage of a student station is that we are able to do whatever we want," Bacorn said.

"We have freedom of artistic expression."

1400 AM SUPER leases the air time to KBYU and does not affiliate itself with any show.

One past the only student station in Provo was KBYU, which plays a lot of local music along with some national hits.

"KBYU is run by staff and faculty," Bacorn said.

Moreover, general manager of KBYU said.

"1400 AM SUPER gives students the opportunity to have hands on experience in a real way."

"Right stations play what the nation says is hot," Bacorn said. "We play what students call in and request, and as the requests we get from the mobile disc jockey business, PHD Systems."

"We tend to stick with the college sound because it is really popular in Provo," Bacorn said.

"1400 AM SUPER is willing to play music from local bands as well."

"Local bands will give us a demo of their format we will play their music," Bacorn said.

"Along with music, SUPER offers a lot of other involvement."

"On Friday we played 'stump the DJ' and the DJs tried to find a modern song we did not have in our collection."

"On Friday night SUPER will be broadcasting live from Pier 54 in Provo."

"We would like to eventually find a place that we could purchase and go to every day," Bacorn said.

"That is a few years down the road," Bacorn said.

"At 1400 AM, McDonalds, Crandall Audio and Zomix Cubed are currently sponsoring the program."

"We do not get sponsors, we do it on our own," said Bush.

"We release time so it is our time," Bacorn said. "We run a disclaimer at the show to tell the public that it is our program."

"1400 AM SUPER is broadcast through all of Provo County and is sometimes heard in Lake County."

Congress needs to ban smoking in public places to protect non-smokers

It's time Congress passed a law to restrict smoking in public places. In the 90's with low-fat diets, skin cancer awareness and other health issues, it's a wonder we still allow the tobacco industry to tamper with our personal health.

Second-hand smoke is the third leading cause of premature death, according to the American Medical Association. The broadest proposal so far to ban smoking in public buildings is not broad enough.

The city council of Laguna Beach, Calif. passed an ordinance last year which prohibited smoking publicly in the community. In this city, the only place a person is allowed to smoke is within the walls of his or her own home. It is one of the few areas in our country that abides by the Surgeon General's warning to avoid second-hand smoke.

The EPA estimates that a national ban on smoking in public places could reduce smoking related deaths nearly 25 percent.

Smoker's do have rights, but smokers should only be allowed to smoke in a place that does not infringe on other's rights to breath clean, healthy air. There is not a public place where smokers do not infringe on non-smokers.

Non-smokers are the ones who need more protected rights. Going to public places such as restaurants should be a pleasant experience. Smokers should at least show enough respect to be willing to step outside and keep their smoke to themselves.

Although people living in Provo do not face the problem of secondhand smoke on a regular basis, it is a large problem outside of Happy Valley. When students graduate and move on, they should be able to expect smoke-free environments.

Congress needs to catch up to the times and enforce stricter bans in all public places. Ban the dangers of secondhand smoke, and we will all live a little longer.

Real life gives summer blues

by
Lisa Grover

For the last several weeks, I have been doing what I always do at the end of the semester. I count off the number of months, weeks, days, minutes and hours until school is out for vacation. It is a long standing tradition of mine. As a freshman, I remember looking at my calendar and thinking "Only 14 more weeks, and then I'll be home." Needless to say, I was a little homesick.

I think I have always done this day counting.

When I was in elementary school, summer held promises of swimming, playing outside and watching endless reruns of Gilligan's Island and The Brady Bunch — my two favorite shows.

As a teenager, summer meant sleeping in, getting a tan and staring at boys at the mall. I know it's lame, but at the time, I couldn't think of anything I would rather do.

As a college student, summer meant a job that would finally replenish my ailing and failing checking account.

But now, I don't know if I'll ever look at summer the same way again. In exactly nine days (that's about 216 hours) I will be a graduate of this fine institution.

When this realization hit me, my response was something like: AAAAAAAAAAH!

People don't believe me. For years now (about 18) I have been talking about what I will do when I graduate from college. Now I'm not so sure I actually want it to happen — don't worry, President Lee, it's too late for me to turn back.

Questions keep waking me up in the middle of the night. Questions like: How will I know when one month ends and the next begins without tests, midterms and finals to mark the time? Where will I buy pencils, pens and gummy bears when I no longer have the bookstore at my convenience? What will I eat for lunch without taco salad in the immediate vicinity?

You see, even though I often complain about all the things that make college hard, the late nights, the erratic eating and exercise schedules and the grinding poverty, I have grown comfortable as a student. I'm good at it. I like the feeling of being on the verge of my life, without having to actually do anything about it. As I said before, I will jump off that proverbial cliff in just about 12,960 minutes.

But I won't make the jump unprepared. BYU has taught me about so many things — cell structure, chemical reactions, great literature, master painters and statistical realities. Even more important, BYU has taught me how to deal with roommates, difficult professors and challenging callings. But the most important thing I have learned is that no matter what happens, I can handle it.

As I leave the school, it will be with a sense of nostalgia for old memories and new friends, but also with a sense of excitement. This year, I will be one among the thousands graduating from this school, ready to take on the world.

I hope it's ready for us.

Save health shuttle

To the Editor:

As an employee of the McDonald Health Center, I have enjoyed the past year as a shuttle driver for the students. Our service provides free rides for students and their dependents to and from the health center. We served more than 5,000 patients last year, several of which would not have been able to transport themselves.

We have been informed that this service is being discontinued. Obviously, I am writing for personal reasons — no one likes losing their job. But I am not so much upset about losing my job as I am the manner in which this whole process has unfolded.

Approximately three weeks ago, we were informed that according to the law, Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, BYU must be completely accessible to disabled students, especially our service. It seemed irrational to spend $30,000 for wheelchair lifts for a handful of students. We were told we are well within operating budget, but the costs of the wheelchair lifts would be too much. So, we were told that we would close down. After personal research on the law, I found out that we do not have to comply until June 26, 1997. This fact was confirmed by the Justice Department over the phone.

When we shared this information with Student Life administrators, they found it "interesting," and said they would pass it along to legal counsel for "review." We have offered compromises in the meantime to accommodate disabled students such as contracting out United Way transportation. This proposition is also being "reviewed" by the proper authorities.

We believed in full faith that this information would save the shuttle indefinitely. We were wrong. We were informed that we would be closed anyway. The exact reason is unclear, but we were informed that it still has to do with the disabled transportation issue. I don't write this letter in defiance of disabled students, I believe they deserve equal rights. However, I am upset with the bureaucracy of administrators on this campus, whose rationale escapes me. If we do need wheelchair lifts, then closing the shuttle service does nothing to alleviate this problem. But since the Federal Government has said we don't have to shut down immediately, I invite any administrator who knows the real reason the shuttle is being closed to contact me personally.

Lied for beard

To the Editor:

I am a liar. I wear a beard and carry a card that says I have "medical approval from the BYU Health Center" to wear a "neatly trimmed" beard. That is not true. I wear a beard for religious reasons (Sikhs don't shave their hair), but there is no other way — besides making a liar out of someone — that BYU can accommodate my case. So every six months a doctor at the Health Center gives me "medical approval" to wear a "neatly trimmed" beard. (Of course, I don't trim my beard). After having been at BYU for almost two years, I am beginning to ask myself: is all this really necessary?

If the issue at stake is really an "honor issue," (see Sharon Kirkham's "Facial Hair allowed with beard waiver card" April 4, in The Universe) then someone is compromising their honesty so that I may keep a beard. I wonder if compromising honesty is not a graver offense than growing facial hair. To what ridiculous extremes the issue can be stretched was revealed to me the other day when I discovered that an acquaintance had been granted permission by a doctor to wear a beard. The reason? Not having a beard causes "psychological distress" to his wife. In simpler English, his wife thinks he looks cuter in a beard!

Someone needs to wake up and discover that the sixties are thirty years behind us; beards don't have the same rebel-without-a-cause connotation anymore. I want to reiterate that this is not an argument about BYU's uniqueness. For as the article adjacent to the one under scrutiny stated, military universities have "stiffer dress code than BYU." But please do take a look at their reasons. "They detract from uniformity"; "...beards add to individuality"; "facial hair prevents a good seal of the protective mask in a chemical environment (such as chemical warfare)" were three of the four reasons given. The third one is easily tackled. Thank heavens, we don't practice chemical warfare at BYU. And the prospects of such an event occurring here don't look too bright either. Regarding the first two reasons, hmmm...

BYU has been unequivocal in denying the allegation that it forces students into a parochial perspective. So I guess the first two reasons given by military schools can't be applied to BYU either. But why am I so concerned about this issue? I have my beard (BYU did me a favor by allowing me to wear one — untrimmed at that — didn't it?); so why can't I just shut up and mind my own business? The reason is because these lopsided policies generate a cognitive dissonance within me. I don't like the fact that someone is made a liar because of me. Besides, I want to stand with my head (turbaned, no less) held high when I step into the world as a BYU graduate (yes, I am kind of concerned with matters of prestige.) I want to be able to say — this time without lying — that BYU is not a totalitarian school; it does its share in fostering the individual. If someone brought up the beard rule at such a moment, I wouldn't know where to look. And I like being able to look somewhere, don't you?

Stolen papers

To the Editor:

In conversation with the publisher of Student Review it has come to my knowledge that, according to their estimates, 1,500 issues of their publication were taken from their stands the week of March 16. The issues stolen contained the controversial article by Matthew MacLean, "Athletes and Alcohol: A Cover-up Conspiracy?" in which several BYU athletes were quoted concerning their knowledge of honor code violations among BYU athletes, and the efforts taken by BYU coaches to protect their team members from university prosecution.

The attitude of the publisher was one of resignation. He was convinced that the newspapers were stolen by individuals implicated in MacLean's article, and that there was basically nothing to be done. Everywhere in Provo, Student Review stands were picked clean. Normally, even after a week of distribution, there remain copies of the Review which are taken away in order to leave room for the upcoming week's issue.

I am concerned by this demonstration of unethical behavior on the part of those who stole the copies of Student Review. Granted, the evidence is circumstantial, it does, however, appear that the reason why this issue, out of the many Student Review publishes, would be targeted was due to the contents of MacLean's article.

I hope this letter at least publicizes an unhappy incident in the history of Student Review. What more can be done?

Night rally won't help

To the Editor:

The Take Back the Night rally hurts feminism. Take Back the Night and other similar protests have been criticized by many women as being self-defeating to the aims and goals of feminism.

Take Back the Night creates a cult of victimology. And that this train of thought is influential was made apparent when The Daily Universe decided to give front-page attention, complete with "cover girl" photo, to the victim of an attempted rape earlier this semester. I feel sympathy for those who have been victimized; however, in making heroes out of victims, we run the risk of creating perverse incentives.

SOLUTION

1. Shoot down one of their jets.
2. Capture the pilot alive.*
3. Beat him up really bad.
4. Show him on T.V. (close-ups work best).
5. Watch the American public get angry.
6. Listen to the president make hollow threats in an attempt to protect the pilot's well-being.
7. Watch the American forces withdraw.
8. Proceed as usual.

Roihppe tells of an incident about a student at Princeton University who told the story of a rape year after year at the Take Back the Night rally. Eventually it was revealed the woman had fabricated her story. Apparently the woman sought the acceptance and validation that Take Back the Night offers victims. The incident created a lot of bad feeling among the people involved.

Take Back the Night prospers on hysteria, paranoia. Despite a lot of campus media coverage this last semester that might suggest otherwise, Provo is a relatively safe place to live. However, when VOICE distributes flyers banning men from campus or nizes Take Back the Night marches, might think differently. Such actions send a message to women that Provo/BYU is full of evil boogey men lurking in the dark and the night is unsafe for women to be alone. Paints women as weak and dependent on colonial patriarchal institutions to solve problems ("Cut down the shrubs. Install blue lights." etc.). Instead of empowering women, Take Back the Night thrives on victimization. With such paranoia rampant and distorting reality, banning from campus becomes an ever more threatening possibility.

Instead of devoting valuable time and to the cult of victimization, VOICE should consider addressing more relevant and significant issues at BYU. I would suggest, for example, organizing a Take the Classics rally. (I exclude the word "Back" because with the night, I don't believe women ever owned the classroom or have even equal partners.) This is a real problem at BYU, and this is where real change in society's view of the rights of women will be affected. And for those women that truly threatened by Provo's dangerous night suggest carrying your own dagger. It's proven effective.

Not a diversity statistic

To the Editor:

"Multiculturalism. Diversity. Representation." To many, these catchphrases connote an enlightened approach to education and employment. But other terms could describe the underlying tenets of multiculturalism. "Racial classification. Stereotyping. Condescension."

Although I grew up in the suburbs of Washington, D.C. as a fourth-generation American, BYU insists I am "multicultural." At BYU, multicultural means non-white citizens — and by that definition I qualify. But slapping me with the multicultural label does little to increase the ever-narrowed level of diversity at this school.

A recent article in The Daily Universe dealt the dean of admissions concerning many students: "we believe that these students should be represented at BYU." But I here to gain an education, not represent race. If BYU sees me foremost as a racial representative — not as a distinct individual — then how does the university expect other view me?

This breed of multiculturalism seems to embody the following implications:

I am less American than white students whose roots are Asian, not American. The color of my skin makes me disadvantaged — a condition requiring special attention or privilege. All Asians (or all Blacks, all Hispanics) are identical being whose uniform backgrounds and attitudes can be representative of individuals. Caucasian students likewise a homogeneous body, lacking substantial diversity. Classifying people by race, making assumptions about their characteristics and identities, and singling them out for different treatment is fine if the intention — but not if the intent is malicious.

Such a double-standard reveals serious flaws in current multicultural trends. Claiming intentions, many multicultural proponents employ the same sweeping generalization by bigots and others whose prejudice based solely on genetic expression.

Efforts to eradicate prejudice, racism, discrimination cannot justifiably proper race-based classifications. For many of the same reasons I oppose racial discrimination, I oppose elements of multiculturalism that attempt to define me by my race.

More choice

Editor:
The March 29 edition of the Daily Universe viewpoint written by Dr. [redacted] entitled "GE: obstacle or opportunity" was printed on the back page. In his viewpoint, [redacted] makes the argument that higher education "better prepares students to render service in the workplace." Just because "understanding the critical structure in India may prove to be crucial to [a] church call," why take the time the way BYU's current GE programs are set up, they are an obstacle to students. GE is a row of red tape in administration has set up on the way to graduation for students to reach.

[redacted] have been instructed to learn from best books. But, the Lord did not say which books those are. Let us choose books that are good.

[redacted] simple, instead of choosing to give a full-inclusive overview of the discipline (in which I would be able to give information that I'd never thought to choose a single aspect of the discipline that would interest me, such as a course in geology or photography class with an emphasis on development.

[redacted] could be true of biology. Although I'm an engineering student, I might be fascinated with the study of the human body and want to know about it instead of how DNA rejuvenerates, reciprocates or interacts.

[redacted] allowed to choose the classes that we take to fulfill our Arts and Sciences requirements. Why aren't we allowed to take Art 101, Architecture 101 classes?

[redacted] these classes can give us an overview of their subject matter as a plethora of information that will change our lives forever. The problem will be remembering [redacted] Education can be a great opportunity. As it stands now, it is nothing but a row of red tape jump through on the path to graduation. I want to be well rounded as anyone, but give me the freedom to choose, don't try to

Look both ways

Editor:
Writing in response to a letter in the March 22, "Crosswalks not safe," I think that it does have a point. Sometimes drivers should be careful, many times the pedestrians are the ones that "left their cars at home." I have a car, and I drive I can hardly see the sidewalks, especially at night, and they are poorly lit and the sidewalks that define them are non-existent. Since a car's headlights point straight ahead, it is impossible for a driver to see a pedestrian until the pedestrian is in the middle of the road. Of course, if a person is spotted in the street, the driver should apply the brakes. Newton's law suggest the car should stop in one instantaneous moment. Depending on how fast the car is going (heaven forbid it be going over 25 mph), sufficient room is needed for the vehicle to stop before it reaches the crosswalk.

[redacted] not saying that pedestrians are at fault every case. All I am saying is that a lot of accidents and even near accidents can be easily avoided if people "use their brain" before crossing the street.

[redacted] simple, a few days ago I was walking near the Crabtree Building and a green walk sign. As I was about to cross the street, a large truck made a right turn in front of me, and I was off. I could have had a self-righteous "I have the right of way" attitude and kept crossing, and I would have been legally correct. However, since I wouldn't have enjoyed being made flat as a pancake, I ran back to the curb to avoid the truck. I thought it more beneficial for myself to take this action.

So when you are crossing the street, please continue taking the advice of your parents and look both ways before you cross. If it is not clear, either run and face the consequences without complaining or wait until there is an acceptable break in traffic. Try some defensive walking techniques and use some common sense.

Campus heroes

To the Editor:

There are many unsung heroes who go the extra mile to provide the students and faculty a safe environment for a University setting. A recent letter wanted to know who was responsible for the cleanup of Maeser Hill. Credit was given to SAC for the additional lighting, and justly so.

However, there are many men and women in the background of whom the students will never know, who work endlessly without much deserved credit and praise for their enduring service to the University community.

At the University Police, we tip our hats to Roy Peterman and his grounds staff. Under his direction and careful scrutiny of his staff, they keep the areas which pose potential dangerous situations for students cut back and cleaned.

They also do this with consideration to the natural environment which needs to be protected. Whenever we have asked for assistance in safety issues, the grounds crew address these issues quickly and with the resolve to help protect our community's safety.

If you walk about campus at night, you cannot help but be impressed with the beautiful lighting that we have. Not only are the new lights aesthetic, they provide the maximum nighttime security lighting available.

The Physical Plant and the Electrical Shop have gone the extra mile in finding light sources that create a safer night environment. Don Frampton, Bob Rhoades and their staff of electricians take their role in creating a safe environment for our University community to a higher level than could be expected.

They have gone the extra mile in looking for funds and developing plans that help upgrade lighting and add additional lighting where ever it is needed.

The electricians of the Physical Plant identify security lighting problems and bring them to our attention at the University Police. This is done out of their concern for the safety of the students.

I wrote this letter that you might know that there are many who work endlessly and selflessly to make the University community a safer place to study, live and work.

Y policy provides safety for bikers, walkers

Universe Services

As the weather improves and serious pollution continues to plague the community, more students, staff and community members are likely to be coming to BYU campus on bicycles.

Although cyclists are welcome on campus, according to the BYU Traffic Office, they should be aware of BYU's policies.

Riding bicycles on campus walkways is permitted, but cyclists must ride slowly and with great care. Speeds on walkways should be only slightly faster than walking pace. Riding at normal bicycle speeds is not permitted at any time or location on campus.

Cyclists must show maximum courtesy and always give pedestrians the right of way, especially at intersections, building entrances and areas of reduced lateral visibility. Cyclists must be especially careful and courteous when passing pedestrians from behind.

During class breaks, cyclists may not ride their bikes on the sidewalk. To protect the buildings, the landscape and accesses, bicycles must not be ridden or parked off paved surfaces anywhere on campus.

Cycling on campus roads along with traffic is strongly discouraged because the roads are narrow. Also, all roadways have raised curbs on both sides, almost any emergency will force a cyclist against the curb and will result in a hard fall.

Cyclists can avoid the dangerous campus roads by using the walkways and the Maeser ramp located at the southwest corner of campus. The Maeser ramp, which enters the campus just east of the Brick Oven Restaurant, can be utilized with relative convenience. Cyclists and pedestrians on the ramp are separated by a physical barrier.

A bicycle lane is planned for the northwest corner of campus. The new lane, still under planning by BYU and Provo City, will be a painted signed route along existing roads and walkways and across at least one posted traffic crossing.

Parking racks, which can accommodate approximately 2,500 bicycles, are available at locations throughout campus with major parking spaces in the center of campus. Cyclists are obligated to park and lock their bicycles at these racks only. Curved-piperacks, with black plastic coating to protect bicycle finishes, have been installed and more are planned to be installed in the future.

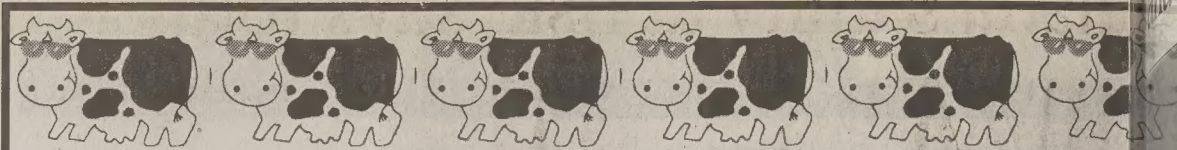

These racks provide security and convenience with the use of cables and U-locks that can be easily attached to these racks from almost any part of the bicycle. It is suggested that connections be made as snugly as possible to protect bicycles from falling over.

The regulations require sacrifice of speed and convenience for cyclists. The policy is not to discourage cyclists but rather to welcome and accommodate them in large numbers without jeopardizing safety for the bicyclists or the pedestrians.

It was established after careful study and debate with students and others associated with the University.

Both cyclists and pedestrians are asked to observe these standards with safety and courtesy and to accommodate one another. Cyclists must always place the pedestrian first. Pedestrians must respect the need for cyclists to use the walkways to avoid the dangers of the roadways.

Since mixing cyclists and motorists is potentially far more dangerous than the combination of cyclists and pedestrians, the above-stated policy has been established for the accommodation of all.

Recruiting fair vital to future teachers, education graduates

By MELINDA R. BALLARD
Universe Staff Writer

Students graduating in education this year who are in search of job may find the "Spring Teacher Recruiting Fair" to be helpful in their endeavors.

The eighth annual Utah Education Placement Association will be held Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the University of Utah in the Olpin Union Building Ballroom. The day is dedicated to college students graduating in April or August in Elementary Education, Special Education or Secondary Education.

"Anyone could come even if they aren't graduating," said Deanna Powers, credential secretary at the Placement Center. "Alumni often go, especially if they are looking to change their job."

Powers said a good share of school districts from the western United States will be there such as Wyoming, California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho and Texas as well as an American international school from Guam.

All Utah school districts will be present too.

Students interested in attending the recruiting fair can pre-schedule interviews at BYU's Placement Center through Thursday. Pre-registration costs are $5 or $7 at the door. Pre-scheduled interviews and those who arrive first will have priority to interview first.

The five universities in Utah are invited to be there. Powers said the recruiting fair is held at the University of Utah because it is a central location for everyone.

Fortunately for BYU students it is an end of the semester reading day.

"Spending the whole day interviewing can save a student a lot of travel fees," Powers said. "There are jobs available if the person is willing to go where there is a job. Rural areas in these states really need good teachers."

Canada's unity at risk, says former prime minister

Jeff Lambson/Daily Universe

FLING NATION: The Right Honorable Joe Clark, former prime minister of Canada, discusses the internal conflict threatening Canada's unity.

Final day of classes celebrated with 'fling'

By LANA KNIGHT
Universe Staff Writer

Despite the temperamental weather, BYUSA plans on celebrating the season with Spring Fling, which will feature a variety of activities, both indoors and outdoors. Students gearing up for finals can break and enjoy outdoor activities such as volleyball, basketball, tug of war and the dunk tank. Dances will be held in the Ernest L. Wilkinson building along with performances by the Warrens, live bands and a concert by Trenchcoats. Events will begin at 8 p.m. while outdoor activities and dances will underway at 10 p.m. Spring Fling is a good opportunity for students to relax and have fun before they get busy with finals," said Allison Nemelka, BYUSA coordinator.

Student turnout and success of activities has been good in the past, said Nemelka. "Spring Fling was the best time I've ever had at a BYUSA activity," said Ginger Phillips, a junior from San Ramon, Calif. Michael Johnson, BYUSA coordinator for Spring Fling said this year's activities will be fun because of the amount of time gone into planning the variety of events. Spring Fling gives students the chance to let out some energy and have some fun, he said. Activities begin at 6 p.m. in the ELWC with a children's carnival, and last until 2 a.m. with outdoor activities and dances. Admission is $2 for students with I.D. and $3 without I.D.

International center celebrates 10-year mark

By KEVIN SCHLAG
Universe Staff Writer

The David M. Kennedy Center for International Relations, celebrating its anniversary this year, is named in honor of a U.S. Secretary of the Treasury who also served as ambassador-at-large for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Kennedy was invited to join Richard Nixon's cabinet as secretary to the president in 1968. He retired from government service in 1973 and was called by LDS President Spencer W. Kimball to be a worldwide representative of the church. Kennedy's role was to establish relations with other countries and gain recognition for the LDS church worldwide. Kennedy gained international experience while working for the International Illinois National Bank Trust Company of Chicago, said Palmer J. Palmer, founding director of the Kennedy Center. Palmer said the bank's international experience enabled Kennedy to establish relations with leaders in other countries. Palmer said the Kennedy Center's mission is to estimate all of BYU's international commitments, said Jeff Ringer, assistant director of the Kennedy Center. President of the United States, Ronald Reagan sent a letter to BYU in 1985 to congratulate the university on the opening of the Kennedy Center. President Reagan called Kennedy an Canadians must increase their nationalistic pride in order for the country to remain unified, said a former Canadian prime minister during a lecture sponsored by Canadian Studies and the David M. Kennedy Center for International Studies Tuesday evening.

The Right Honorable Joe Clark made his remarks during his lecture entitled, "Canadian Perspective" as the recipient of the Palmer Annual Lecture Series award, which was established to bring prominent Canadian scholars to come and lecture at BYU.

Clark cited two dominant pressures that could eventually splinter Canada. The internal pressure of keeping the country together, coupled with the external pressure of a growing world economy, must be alleviated or else Canada could disintegrate, he said.

"There is no single source to the problems Canada is facing," Clark said.

He also noted that "good things come apart too," commenting on the fallacy that most Canadians think Canada will remain unified because it always has been that way.

With 27 million citizens living in the second largest country in the world, Canadian citizens face the difficult adjustment of reinforcing national pride, or else Quebec could secede from Canada, with other provinces following suit, Clark said.

Traditional Canadian political structures must evolve to handle international problems, Clark said. Canadians are more informed about issues, and the government must adapt to its citizens' changing needs, he said.

Also contributing to the internal pressures of Canada is the province of Quebec, Clark said. Quebec knows what it wants and has a unified course for the future, but Canada does not, he said.

This factors with added international pressure are taking their toll on

THE BUY BACK STORY

1. We are buying back books which instructors have requested as texts for future semesters.
2. We buy back books that are on our list at 60% of the new (not used) price.
3. We resell our used books at 75% of the new price.
4. The books must be the current edition, the correct volume, number, in good condition, etc.
5. If any of your books are not on our list, the reasons are as follows:
  - A. We have not received a written request from the faculty for future classroom use.
  - B. It is an old edition, programmed text, etc.
  - C. In a very few cases, we're overstocked and cannot send the overstock back to the publisher.
  - D. We have bought back the maximum limit based on what the instructors have submitted as their classroom enrollment.

- *Most stores pay no more than 50% of what you paid for the book. We are one of the very few that offer you 60% of the current new price.
- *Nebraska Book Co. will make you an offer on most of the books that we cannot buy back. The price they offer depends on the national resale market.
- *We at the Bookstore understand the frustrations of exam week and have made an extra effort to buy back as many books as possible.

Pres. Lee honors employees for outstanding performance

By AMY LEEMAN
Universe Staff Writer

President Rex E. Lee has honored 11 BYU employees with the President's Appreciation Award for their outstanding performance, creativity and commitment to the University.

Recipients include: Christine Burner, services secretary at Alumni Relations; Jill Fielding, secretary for the Math Department; Carol R. Hardman, associate director of Sponsored Projects in the Office of Research and Creative Work; Shirleyne Hunter, catering consultant with BYU Dining Services; Gary L. Kramer, associate dean of Admissions and Records; Kenneth Lindquist, director of Visual Communications in the Division of Continuing Education; Penny Morrell, manager of Student Employment Services; Ferrin L. Orton, director of Student Financial Services in the Financial Services Department;

Connie Redd, secretary in the Faculty Personnel Office; Carolyn Tuitupou, administrative assistant in General and Honors Education; and Pat Williams, office manager for the Admissions Office.

"I'm merely a product of my environment," Redd said.

"BYU is a wonderful place to work and I have a lot of great people to work with. I'm very appreciative, there are a lot of people who deserve it."

Rest, washing, exercise, keys to avoiding illness

By SCOTT BRIGHTON
Universe Staff Writer

The Student Advisory Council Communicable Illness Committee has completed an investigation regarding the spreading of illnesses on campus and offer students a set of guidelines to reduce risks of getting sick.

The committee first recommends that students get a yearly immunization against the flu. They also suggest frequent hand-washing — especially after using the bathroom.

Other guidelines include:

- *Staying at least three feet away from sick people
- *Avoid touching your face
- *Sit in the back of class
- *Exercise three times a week
- *Get at least six to eight hours of sleep per night
- *Put a capful of bleach in the water when washing dishes
- *Don't fix food directly on the counter

- *Get immunized against rubella
- *Avoid tattoos and frequent manicures
- *People who are sick should be considerate to others by staying home as much as possible.

Glen Allman, professor of microbiology, says the best way to fight illness is to prevent it by taking care of the body, providing adequate rest, exercise and diet, and making sure the immune system is in top condition.

"Oftentimes too much is demanded of the body and the stress level exceeds the bodily threshold which makes the body susceptible to disease," said Randall Roper of the SAC committee.

Roper said the body gets used to a certain amount of sleep per night and functions best on a regular schedule with that amount (six to eight hours).

Roper said people will be healthier if they exercise three times a week.

Textile Department gives spring fashion preview

By JENNIFER CARR
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Using the music of "Ace of Base" and cuts from the soundtrack of "So I Married an Axe Murderer," BYU students gave a preview to spring fashion in the Spring Directions fashion show Thursday in the ELWC Garden Court.

Students from the Clothing and Textiles 372 class brought together music, models and clothes that represent a spring college lifestyle.

"We wanted to cater to our audience by choosing a store in the price range of college students," said Christy Abraham, the student in charge of the models and backstage, from San Diego, Calif., a junior majoring in fashion merchandising.

One of the students in the class is an assistant manager of Brooks in the University Mall so the class used the clothes from Brooks, Abraham said.

Involved with hosting a fashion show was choosing models, fitting the clothes, choreographing the movement on stage and advertising the show.

"The models were our own contacts," Abraham said. "We each got a friend to model."

Because of the nature of fashion, the class had to wait until the end of the semester to pick out the clothes for the fashion show.

"We would look at the clothes Brooks had, pick some out, but when we went back to get them the clothes would be gone," Abraham said.

There were dress rehearsals without the Brooks clothes — for choreography — then fittings with the clothes, and then a full dress rehearsal, Abraham said.

"There was also a lot of coordination with advertising," Abraham said.

The show included five sets of clothes: the Navy & White Set, the Jumpers, the Shorts and Vests, the Dresses and the Neutrals.

The most notable trends in the fashion show were the knit shirts, the long length of the dresses and jumpers with slits on the side — going up the thigh.

The colors of the clothes were navy, white, beige, cream and black with accents in salmon, yellow and green.

"Getting the show done was overwhelming at the end of the semester," Abraham said.

for this year was Dan Britton, a mily member from Arizona State iversity.

1994 show is a larger show than before, with more pieces being bated than in the past, Marshall erent types of pieces in the show de jewelry, sculpture, watercolintmaking, photography, paint-and others. Hudgens said the this year was open for the first time to non-majors.

Marshall said the type of work produced by student artists can be different than the type produced by professors or by those more established in the discipline.

Most of the pieces in the student show are available for sale, Hudgens said. The prices for the pieces range anywhere from $15 to $5,000.

The show will be displayed until April 29.

NEW DISCOVERY: In a study performed by John Hopkins University, rats which were fed broccoli compounds have a lower risk of developing breast tumors.

Research shows broccoli can reduce risk of breast tumors

The Associated Press

Rats exposed to powerful cancer-causing chemicals and then fed compounds extracted from broccoli have a lower risk of developing breast tumors, according to a study by John Hopkins University medical researchers.

The study, published today in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, identified the anti-cancer chemicals as sulforaphane and some closely related compounds. All are found in broccoli and other vegetables.

In a process not thoroughly understood, these vegetable compounds tend to amplify the body's own defenses against chemicals that can lead to cancer, the report said.

"Most cancer-causing chemicals are themselves innocuous until they enter cells where they are converted to enzymes which are highly reactive and are capable of initiating tumor formation," said Dr. Paul Talalay, a Hopkins researcher who is co-author of the study.

Sulforaphane and its chemical cousins, he said, cause the body to produce another type of enzyme that blocks the cancer-causing action of the first enzyme.

"The second family of enzymes tend to detoxify the effects of the other enzymes," said the researcher. He called the results "quite dramatic."

In the study, Talalay and his colleagues exposed 145 rats to a powerful cancer-causing chemical called DMBA. Twenty-five of the rats were used as controls and received no drug treatment. The rest received various doses of sulforaphane and related compounds. The drugs were synthetic copies of the compounds found in vegetables.

At the end of 50 days, 68 percent of the control rats had developed mammary tumors, but only about 26 percent of those receiving high doses of sulforaphane developed cancer.

Similar results were found for another substance, called compound 2, that is related to sulforaphane. Other related compounds also were effective, but to a lesser degree.

Talay said that the studies showed the sulforaphane-type chemicals tended to either prevent or delay tumor formation and that when cancer did develop, the tumors were smaller and less numerous.

The vegetable compounds work only as a cancer preventer, he said, cancer patients not expect benefit from bro-binges. Talalay said a clinical study of human volunteers is planned.

Y professor performs in one-woman show

Universe Services

The love story of Elizabeth Barrett and Robert Browning will unfold at BYU today through Saturday when faculty actress, director and teacher Jean R. Jenkins offers her one-woman show about the famous couple.

Performances for "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" will begin at 7:30 p.m. today in the Nelke Experimental Theatre. Tickets, available through the fine arts ticket office (378-4322), are $7 for the public, $6.50 for alumni and senior citizens and $6 for students, staff and faculty.

JENKINS

The production is the third installment in this year's Entr'Acte Series sponsored by the Department of Theatre and Film.

Jenkins' presentation is known as an impersonation, a unique form of a one-person show where the actor plays all the roles, in this case, nine.

Jenkins is an associate professor of theatre and film where she specializes in voice, diction, interpretation and dialects.

Recognized for her one-woman shows, she has presented "A Majority of One," "Raisin in the Sun," "Gaslight" and "Green Pastures." She recently played leads in "Driving Miss Daisy" and "Foxfire."

Other film and stage roles include leads in "Christmas Lilies of the Field," "Two Good and Noble Men," "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Of Quiet Desperation," "Family Portrait," "Steel Magnolias" and "Ah, Wilderness."

"FEATURING THE TRENCHCOATS"

Rio Canyon for photo workshop

by JENNIFER CARR
Universe Lifestyle Writer

Photographers can spend two nights and five days in southern Utah photographing Bryce Canyon and Zion's National Parks with instructors from BYU's continuing education Landscape Photography Workshop will be June 6 through 10. The workshop is the first of its kind, including not only hands-on instruction in photography and critiquing, but also a visit to southern Utah, said Linda Hales, director of BYU Conferences and Workshops.

The workshop is designed to help photographers improve landscape photography skills through critiques, instruction and a published photographer's perspective.

"If someone else critiques you, you can see your bad points," Hales said. "Others can show you aspects you didn't add to your quality." Don Rainer will be the field instructor. Rainer authored a photo book on Native American life. He also had exhibitions in New York, Washington D.C., New Mexico and Utah, according to a workshop brochure.

The first day of the workshop will include classroom instruction and a visit to Rock Canyon. The second day, participants will leave for southern Utah and will return to Provo on the fourth day. The last day will include classroom instruction, critiques and awards for the workshop.

Participants who do not live in Provo, housing arrangements can be made with the Provo Inn at a discounted rate. All participants will pay for the lodging and food. Lodging in southern Utah will also be responsible for one of the meals during the workshop.

The workshop price is $225 for participants who prefer a double occupancy room in southern Utah or participants who prefer a single occupancy room in southern Utah.

The workshop has only a few open spots. Photographers can register by calling (801) 378-4853. The workshop accepts payment by VISA, MasterCard or check. Checks should be payable to BYU and sent to the Provo Conferences and Workshops. Registration deadline is May 2.

Utah horn player at BYU today

by BETHANY HANKS
Universe Lifestyle Writer

BYU welcomes premiere musicians from the Utah Symphony and the Provo area, who will present an extraordinary recital "Lyric Pieces for Horn and Piano," tonight at 7:30 in the Hansen Recital Hall, free of charge.

Sam Barnewitz, the associate principal horn with the Utah Symphony, and Ricklen Noblis, principal with the Utah Symphony Orchestra, will perform a collection of classical romance arrangements.

In addition to the Music Department, the program will feature Schumann's "Fairyland," Brahms' "Dedication," and "Romance," Strauss' "Lullaby" and Brahms' "Lullaby." In addition to these classical numbers, Barnewitz will perform "Love Songs" from contemporary composer Alec Wilder.

Barnewitz was winner of the International Horn Competition in 1992. He is a graduate of North Carolina School of Music and the renowned Juilliard School of Music. Barnewitz currently teaches horn students at the University of Utah in addition to performing with the symphony. Barnewitz has soloed in Carnegie Hall, the Kennedy Center and Lincoln Center and has joined the New York Philharmonic, the New York Chamber Orchestra and the St. Luke's Ensemble Orchestra in the "Big Apple."

Lowie, professor of French and also a disc jockey at classical radio station in Salt Lake City.

MODERN SCRIPTURE: Members of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" perform a musical version of the Old Testament until April 23.

Grand Theatre presents hip, musical Bible story

By TIFFANY CRAMER ELIASON
Universe Lifestyle Writer

"Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" is the traditional Old Testament story with American Bandstand appeal now being performed at the Grand Theatre in Salt Lake City through April 23.

Performances for this popular musical are Monday through Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

"Joseph" had its beginnings as a 20-minute show for an English boys' school choir. It was composed by Andrew Lloyd Webber, who was 19 at the time, and 23-year-old Tim Rice, according to Grand Theatre Marketing Director Cindy Gubler.

The story is that of the Biblical Joseph who was sold into Egypt by his brothers. The play turns into a funky musical by taking out the "thees" and "thous" and adding some more modern styles including a cowboy hoedown, rock 'n' roll to the recounting of Pharaoh's dream, an island rhythm and '70s psychedelic disco music, Gubler said.

"The version we're doing is the one currently on Broadway, and in London, and the one Donny Osmond is starring in for a production in Canada," Gubler said. "The reason this musical has done so well is because it appeals to all ages and different people. It's not just a religious play, instead it's a fun way to look at a Biblical story."

"The costuming is taken from the Biblical era but includes some contemporary styles including beehive hairdos and sideburns. In one scene some of Joseph's brothers come out with white sports socks on. This isn't a serious Bible story," she said.

It's a contemporary look at a Bible story. Pharaoh comes out in one scene and pulls off his cloak revealing an Elvis costume. He removes the scarves from his neck and puts them around people in the audience while he sings, she said.

The scenery depicts Biblical times but also has a splash of the 20th century in it, such as the neon lights on the pyramids, Gubler said.

The performance is directed by Ken Plain and Marilyn Montgomery who go to as many of the "Joseph" productions throughout North America as they can.

"Ken and Marilyn saw Donny Osmond perform and said he is very good. He believes in what he's singing so it moves the audience even more. They took this into consideration when they cast the character Joseph," Gubler said.

A live orchestra will accompany this fast-moving performance with music from the Broadway soundtrack.

"The Grand is a community theater," Gubler said. "Our actors are locals who are not paid. Some of them are students at Salt Lake Community College, some are actors who come and donate their time. We want it to be a Utah theater."

Tickets prices are $2 to $10. Call 368-4222 for more information.

BYU sweeps Falcons in double-dip

By MIKE RICKS
Universe Sports Writer

First baseman David Bayles went 6-7 at the plate Tuesday to lead BYU in a doubleheader sweep over Air Force 10-6 and 8-6.

Bayles went 4-4 in the first game including a three-run homer in the second inning. He followed that performance by going 2-3 in the nightcap with another home run.

"Today was a day when I really saw the ball well and I felt like I was in one of those zones," Bayles said.

The opening victory over the Falcons ended the Cougars three-game losing streak, the longest for BYU since 1977.

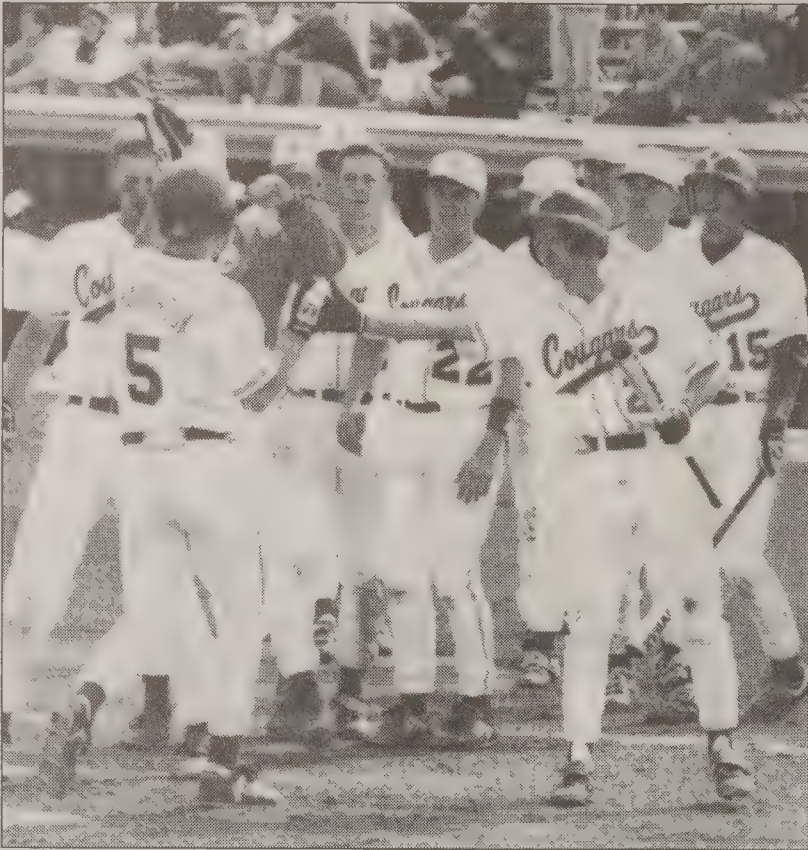

Coach Gary Pullins said the win came from what the Cougars had previously been lacking, timely hitting.

"Everyone kept asking if our minds were on the WAC race," Pullins said. "But we were actually trying to concentrate on one game at a time instead of thinking about the WAC race."

Travis Dowdell started the first game for the Cougars, but quickly gave up seven runs on five hits. Pullins pulled Dowdell out of the game after 1 2/3 innings and brought in Jorge Jaime. Jaime allowed only one run on four hits for the remaining 5 1/3 innings to get the win. His record improved to 6-2.

Good starting pitching and patience at the plate was the key to the Cougars winning the second game.

Through six innings Cougar starter Brian Knoll (2-3) allowed only two

GOOD FOR TWO: The BYU baseball team swept the Air Force Falcons in a double header at Cougar Field Tuesday. BYU won the games 10-6 and 8-6 respectively.

runs. He started to get into trouble in the seventh inning, but Kevin Federaro came into the game and shut the Falcons down to preserve the win.

In the sixth inning of the nightcap, the Cougars had only two hits but worked Falcon pitchers for five walks which resulted in five runs.

Cougar basketball player Robbie Reid started both games in right field. He made a nice catch in the sixth inning of the second game and threw to first base to double up a Falcon runner. The play halted a potential AFA rally. He was a combined 0-6 at the plate in both games with two RBIs.

The Cougar ball team improves its record to 15-14 overall and 4-5 in the Eastern Division of the WAC. AFA drops to 20-17 and 4-8.

The Cougars host Southern Utah University Wednesday in a double-header beginning at noon.

Racquetballers dominate at national finals

By ALLEN BRIGHTON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's and women's racquetball teams set a school record at the Intercollegiate National Tournament held in Phoenix, Ariz., April 6-10, by hauling in 15 medals collectively.

The women's team narrowly lost the national championship and finished in second place. The men's team took fourth place, and the combined men's and women's team took fourth in the nation.

In a field that included 39 colleges and universities with 225 contestants competing, BYU's women collected eight medals and the men won seven.

Steve Black placed higher than any other division-one player in BYU history. He lost to the eventual national champion in the quarterfinals. Brian Campbell, Danny Spencer, and Chris Crawford all lost in the semi-finals in division three, four, and five respectively. Each of them placed fourth as they had to forfeit their last match that was played on Sunday.

For the women, Val Shewfelt captured the first singles Gold medal ever for BYU by winning division-four. Shewfelt also won a doubles title with Kris Wardup in division two. Wardup grabbed a silver in division-three, while teammates Karen Pearson and Melissa Hendricks captured gold in division-five and six.

Pearson paired up with Lori Thompson to win gold in division-three doubles.

Christy McAlpine captured first place in the consolation bracket for her division.

"BYU is returning five of the six top men's and women's players next year," Bruce Rowe, team manager, said. "All the other top schools are only returning one or two players. BYU will be strong contenders for the men's and women's national championships next year."

Assistant coach Roger Flick said that the top schools all have better success recruiting because they are able to offer scholarships to their players.

Rugby team wins, keeps perfect record

By ALLEN BRIGHTON
Universe Sports Writer

The Provo Cougars, a women's rugby team comprised of BYU students, continued their perfect season with wins over teams from Bozeman, Mont., and Pocatello, Idaho.

The Cougars defeated Bozeman 19-5 and Pocatello 19-7.

For a team with only three players with previous experience, the Cougars have been remarkably successful during the season.

In their first game against Bozeman; Wendy Hunt, Melissa Brooks and Anita Haberlach scored a try each. Haberlach kicked two of the three conversions. A try is worth five points and a conversion kick is worth two.

Against Pocatello, rugby players Dana Wood, Ricci Bell and Juliet

Paul scored a try each and Hunt kicked two of the conversions.

"We came, we destroyed left," team captain Marni Mill Coach Randy Leininger, member of BYU men's rugby said "Team cohesiveness was apparent this weekend. They played two great games as a team."

Men's rugby players Jaime H. Troy Stevens also assist with coaching. Jill Bickford, a rookie from Virginia said that they owe a lot of their success to coaches who give up much time to prepare them.

Rookie Kari Wakild had weekend with numerous hits both games.

"You get the greatest rush someone twice your size," said.

Walsh leads different team in classroom

of his fame in the community as a local football star. But the few students in the class who understand Walsh is not a "normal" person did not even find that out until Walsh had already been working with them for over a month.

"Why is everyone taking pictures of Mr. John?" asked Amanda Leners, a seven-and-a-half-year-old from Provo.

BYU quarterback

As Walsh drew a pie chart on the chalk board for his group of five students to better visualize the lesson on fractions that he was teaching them, Mrs. Buss (as she is known to her students) pointed out that these students were reacting to Walsh long before they were told that he was the star quarterback at BYU. "Most of them still do not realize who he is," said Buss. "They just look to him as a friend who helps them and ask all week when he will be coming back."

While Walsh surely understands that he enters his junior season at BYU on the brink of national stardom, one would never see that by watching the sincerity in which he works with his group of special education students.

"Working with these kids gives me the opportunity to give something back to the community, and it is important to me that I do that," Walsh said.

What Walsh may not understand is that the impact he is having on these students may mean more to them down the road by means of an education than any accomplishments he earns on the field.

"Varun (MacDonald) has trouble communicating and he only has the physical ability to control his lower right leg," Buss said as she pointed to the nine-year-old sitting in his wheelchair. "He may not seem very responsive, but he is—he never said a word to me all year long, even when I talked to him. But, the first day John was here I asked Varun if he wanted to come and meet John Walsh and he just about screamed out 'yes' because he was so excited."

Some of the kids who have responded to Walsh's lessons by earning better grades on math assignments have trouble communicating with their other teachers. But Walsh, who finds his receivers to throw too all over the field with ease on Saturdays, has no problem finding a way to communicate with his new teammates, the students, during the week.

"The kids really get excited when he comes," Buss said. "He encourages them to work hard and do their homework and it has really benefitted them in their other subjects as well."

When Walsh was asked to make a short appearance in one of the other second grade classrooms, the students in the new classroom seemed to be too busy trying to get Walsh's autograph to pay attention to the message he was preaching on staying away from drugs and alcohol.

"I am not sure if these kids even understand about drugs and what they are yet," said classroom teacher Miss Giles.

In order for John to get his message across to the students about the negative effects of drugs and alcohol, the conversation had to be started off by reminding the students of the day one of them found a cigarette butt on the playground.

"They respond well to him," Giles said. "Especially now that they have been told who he is and have his autograph on their desk."

The students in Giles class had a better understanding of Walsh's notoriety, and were curious as to how they could become famous like John.

"In order to be an athlete you need to eat healthy foods and drink a lot of juice to stay in good shape," Walsh told the class. "When you take drugs and smoke it makes your body unhealthy and it is harder to compete."

CONTINUING YOUR STUDIES IN COUNSELING, PSYCHOLOGY, SOCIAL WORK OR RELATED AREAS?

Our educational database contains information on more than 4,000 graduate concentration areas, representing over 1,000 schools. This makes it easy to find the program that's right for you.

We eliminate the hours spent researching graduate programs and the time-consuming effort of contacting graduate schools for more information. We can provide:

- ✓ Literature/catalogs describing over 4,000 graduate study programs
- ✓ Literature and application materials for more than 300 credentialing programs

Bonds homers in 9th to end Braves streak at seven

Associated Press

Barry Bonds hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning and pinch-hitter John Patterson doubled home the go-ahead run Tuesday night as the Giants beat Atlanta 7-5, stopping the Braves season-opening winning streak at seven.

Atlanta was off to its best start since going 13-0 in 1982.

After Bonds' homer, Todd Benzinger singled off John Smoltz (1-1), bringing on Mark Wohlers. After a sacrifice and grounder, Patterson doubled and scored on a single by Darre Lewis.

Steve Frey (1-0) pitched two shutout innings and Mike Jackson picked up his first save.

Bonds' homer, his third of the season, came after Matt Williams led off with an infield single.

Smoltz allowed six runs and 10 hits in eight-plus innings.

Jazz win, streak hits 3 in a row

Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Jazz stayed within two games of Phoenix in the race for the fourth-best record in the Western Conference, getting 21 points from Karl Malone and 20 from Jeff Hornacek in a 126-91 rout of Sacramento on Tuesday night.

It was Utah's third straight lopsided decision, following a 24-point victory over the Clippers and a 17-point win over Dallas.

The Jazz broke the game open with an 18-0 run early in the first half and a 7-0 run late in the second quarter. Two free throws by Bryon Russell gave Utah its biggest lead, 115-73 with 7:35 left in the fourth quarter.

Felton Spencer added 16 points and David Benoit 15 for Utah. Mitch Richmond scored 20 points for the Kings, who have lost four straight road games and eight of their last 11 overall.

Utah trailed 19-18 with 3:37 left in the first quarter before scoring the next 18 points. Sacramento pulled within 14, 48-34, on a jumper by Tisdale with 3:42 left in the half, but Utah then scored the next seven points.

The Jazz opened the third quarter with a 32-9 run in the first 8 1/2 minutes, with Felton Spencer scoring 13 of his 16 points in the spurt.

Lady falls from upper deck at opening of new stadium

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, Texas — A woman posing for a picture fell from the upper deck in right field of the Texas Rangers' new stadium shortly after Monday's season opener ended, team officials said.

A security guard was on the way to tell 26-year-old Holly Minter of Plano to get off the rail when she slipped and landed in the lower deck.

The woman was taken via helicopter to Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas. She was listed in critical condition early today.

"(She) did a somersault, a flip and a half, and landed on back and head", Frank Buckhorn, 30, of Arlington, said.

The impact broke a chair in the lower Home Run Porch, witnesses said.

"The impact is what I remember," David Espinosa said. "It sounded real bad."

Among the criticisms of the $189 million stadium The Ballpark in Arlington is that the front rail around all sections is too low. There are no warning signs on the railings.

Rangers president Tom Schieffer said the railings meet or exceed national safety standards, but promised to raise them if the team determine they are unsafe.

Nu Skin starts 'homework hotline' to help Provo parents keep up on assignments

By TIFFANY ZWEIFEL
Universe Staff Writer

As part of its school adoption program, Nu Skin International has installed a "homework hotline" at Franklin Elementary, said Jan Hemming, manager of media relations for Nu Skin.

The hotline allows parents to call in to check on children's homework assignments, and it helps absent students keep up with the other children, she said.

To make the program possible, Nu Skin is providing 90 telephone lines and access to the company's computers, she said.

Since the program was started early this year, "teachers have noticed a marked improvement in the communication between school, students and families," said Marlin Palmer, Franklin Elementary principal. "There has been a decrease in late and missing homework."

Nu Skin has also donated bags and binders to students, file cabinets to teachers and $5,000 to start a student-parent reading program, Hemming said.

Nu Skin employees have also volunteered their time to repair and stamp books for the school library, she said.

"All of us have a stake in the future of the children of this community," said Sandie Tillotson, Nu Skin vice president. "If we can help instill in them the belief that they are individually important and that the community cares, then maybe the program will contribute, in a small way, to their future citizenship and build stronger bonds of trust and hope."

Because the school is located downtown, it faces problems such as a high turnover rate and a majority of families living near the poverty level, Palmer said.

"Our school district has seldom seen such generosity," he said.

"Each time a school is matched with a corporation I see a new awakening and appreciation take place," said Steven Hall, executive director of the Provo School District Foundation.

"The most exciting result is that kids get educational resources they wouldn't otherwise have."

Other projects under consideration are awards and recognition programs, computer services, training assistance, product and equipment donations and student tutoring, Hemming said.

Jet skiers venture into cold water, not waiting for summer to arrive

Spring fever strikes as rising temperatures melt snow on slopes

By MARNEE MORTENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

As Alta maintains 114 inches of mid-mountain snow, water and jet skiers, with a spring bug that just can't wait, head out to Utah lakes and reservoirs.

When Rebecca Sargeant, a junior majoring in business management from Elko, Nev., noticed the first signs of spring she hit Utah Lake to test her new jet ski.

"It was freezing," she said. "The day turned out very windy," Sargeant said.

She saw boaters, but no water skiers.

She said a couple more jet skiers were coming out as she was leaving.

"It was definitely spring fever," Sargeant said.

"A lot of people just had the itch."

With equipment like dry suits, socks, and gloves, skiers are extending their season.

"It extends the season so you can ski about 9 months of the year," said Kristin Mann, part owner of M & M Water Sports Unlimited in Salt Lake City.

"My husband has been skiing since February," she said. "The lakes don't usually freeze until December. You're generally able to get in the water in March," Mann said.

She said dry suits protect the body at a temperature of 33 degrees and up.

"Dry suits work in anything you can get into that is not frozen," Mann said.

Over Easter weekend, one Salt Lake Community College freshman from Sandy grabbed his dry suit and went water skiing at Utah Lake.

"It was very cold," said Andy Hasleton.

"You'd stick your feet in and it would just hurt. Your feet would burn."

Since Mortensen wore a dry suit, only his feet were afflicted by the cold.

Neoprene gloves and socks would have helped ease the pain of the cold, Mann said.

Mann said wet suits are recommended at 50 degrees and up.

"Anything colder they really recommend dry suits," Mann said.

Abuse stories and stirring photos awarded Pulitzers

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The New York Times added three Pulitzers to boost its collection to 69 on Tuesday in a contest that honored gut-wrenching photographs and stories about violence against women and victims of radiation.

The Times won its first Pulitzer for photography in addition to prizes for features and spot news. The Chicago Tribune claimed two, for editorials on child abuse and science writing.

Edward Albee ended a nearly 20-year drought of commercial and artistic recognition, capturing the 1994 Pulitzer in drama for "Three Tall Women."

The play, which reopened off-Broadway on Tuesday night, grew out of Albee's relationship with his mother — "an exorcising of demons," he said.

The 1994 journalism winners captured America's conscience: gut-wrenching photos from foreign lands and stories that sought to right wrongs against women, children and victims of government.

The national reporting prize went to Eileen Welsome of The Albuquerque Tribune for her stories about Americans used in government plutonium experiments a half-century ago.

She spent years tracking down the story after learning of brief government reports.

The Times was honored for its spot news reporting on the World Trade Center bombing that killed six people, injured more than 1,000 and shattered Americans' confidence that terrorism was a foreign problem.

With 69 Pulitzers — more than any other news organization — the Times captured its first photography prize for free-lancer Kevin Carter's feature photograph of a vulture hovering over a starving Sudanese girl who had collapsed on her way to a feeding center.

The Chicago Tribune won two prizes: for R. Bruce Dold's editorials about flaws in the Illinois child welfare system, illustrated by the murder of a little boy; and for Ronald Kotulak's explanatory journalism that sought to unravel the mysteries of the brain.

Journalists from The Dallas Morning News won the international reporting prize — the paper's sixth Pulitzer — for a series examining violence against women around the world.

Winners were announced by Columbia University, which administers the Pulitzer competition. Awards carry a prize of $3,000 except the public service award, which comes with a gold medal.

Because this
"It's a free country" stuff only goes so far.

Conference to instruct teens, parents how to boost families

By HEATHER MCDONALD
Universe Staff Writer

The Utah Valley Regional Medical Center's Outpatient Psychology Clinic is holding a one-day conference Saturday in an effort to help equip parents and youth with concepts and tools to form a tighter family unit.

"Raising Healthy Families in the Nineties" is a conference designed to help all family members work together, said Esther Lockart, Ph.D., a doctor of clinical health psychology at UVRMC.

As teen drug use and sexual activity increases, many parents are facing issues they have never dealt with before, Lockart said. "One goal is to give parents skills on how to get kids to talk openly about these issues," she said.

Bonnie Studdert, chair-elect of the Governor's Commission for Women and Family, will be the keynote speaker.

Religious groups throughout the country are realizing that the family is a key area of focus for the future, Studdert said.

"Even the pope is encouraging families to go back to traditional values,"

Studdert's work involves traveling throughout Utah, identifying concerns of women and families of all backgrounds and voicing them to the governor in an effort to influence legislation.

The commission also serves as a liaison between different women's organizations throughout the state.

Topics of specifically focused seminars for parents and spouses will include: attributes of a healthy family, parent effectiveness training, managing anger in the family, attention deficit disorder in children, and self-esteem for parents.

Topics for children and teenagers will include: building self-esteem, resisting peer pressure, and substance abuse.

The conference will be held in the Clark Auditorium at UVRMC, 1034 N. 500 West, Provo, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Registration begins at 8 a.m. There is a $5 fee for one parent, $10 for a couple or $25 for the whole family.

For registration and further information, call 371-7525.

Y publication seeks information to aid in reporting of research

Universe Services

The Department of Communications is compiling a list of all publications originating at BYU for use by the Daily Universe as a resource for reporting campus research and activities.

John R. Hughes, professor of communications and director of the project, said the list will help the Daily Universe be more representative and thorough in its coverage of the research aspect of BYU.

"This list will be a valuable tool for the students at the newspaper, as it will provide a window into the research side of BYU," said Jeff McClellan, a senior journalism major who is responsible for compiling the list.

"It will also benefit the entire University community by providing more fair, broad and accurate coverage of the University in general," he said.

The list will include all BYU publications, both student and faculty generated, from department newsletters to international journals that are edited and published at BYU.

If you are aware of one or more campus publications that should be included in the list, please call McClellan at 378-7581 by Friday, April 15, and tell him the name of the publication, the department of origin, your name and your extension. (If no answer, please leave the information on phone mail.)

NATO jets on hold, Serb guns mostly quiet in Goradze

Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serb gunners held back from launching attacks on Goradze and challenging NATO again Tuesday, but dueled with government troops in the hills outside the Muslim-held town.

Serb leaders lashed out at NATO for staging air strikes Sunday and Monday on Serb forces surrounding the eastern enclave, and the Serbs' military commander ordered his troops to shoot down any NATO planes they see.

"Let him try. They shoot back," said Michael McCurry, a U.S. State Department spokesman in Washington. "The NATO aircraft are well equipped to handle anti-aircraft fire," he added.

President Clinton warned that he would not rule out more air attacks on Serb forces to protect Goradze as well as other areas controlled by Bosnia's Muslim-dominated government. The U.S. ambassador to the United Nations said air raids could help push the Serbs back to peace talks.

Government and Serb troops were reported fighting over some high ground southeast of Goradze. U.N. officials said Serb artillery had not shelled the town since Monday evening after two NATO jets struck Serb positions for the second time in two days.

The Serb military leader, Gen. Ratko Mladic, visited front lines near Goradze and ordered his troops "to shoot down every aircraft flying in their direction."

He was accompanied by the Serbs' political leader, Radovan Karadzic, who accused NATO of entering the war on behalf of the Bosnian government.

"The only thing left for them to do is to send in ground troops," Karadzic told the troops, according to the Bosnian Serb news agency. "But you are not barefoot Somalis. You are the best army in Europe."

Bosnia's Muslim President, Alija Izetbegovic, said the United Nations and NATO were not being tough enough with the Serbs about stopping attacks on Goradze, one of six U.N.-declared "safe areas." The "selectivity and limitation" of the air strikes "just have encouraged the enemy," he said.

In remarks to reporters, Clinton left open the possibility of using air strikes to protect Goradze and stop any attack on other U.N. safe areas. "I wouldn't rule anything out," he said.

Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said: "The purpose of the air strikes is not just for the sake of bombing. The purpose is in order to make sure that the parties do proceed to the negotiating table."

Monday's attack on Serb armored vehicles by two U.S. FA-18 jets was the second in 24 hours near Goradze, 35 miles southeast of Sarajevo. Two F-16 fighter-bombers attacked a Serb tank and command post Sunday.

Both attacks were requested by Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, the U.N. military commander in Bosnia, ostensibly to protect U.N. aid workers and military observers who were said to be endangered by the Serb shelling of Goradze.

U.N., American and Russian diplomats kept up efforts to keep weeks of progress toward peace in Bosnia from unraveling over the confrontation at Goradze. The NATO commander for southern Europe, Adm. Leighton Smith, also flew to Sarajevo.

A U.N. spokesman in New York, Joe Sills, said Smith would meet with the U.N. civilian and military chiefs in Bosnia, the Bosnian president, U.S. special envoy Charles Redman and Russian envoy Valery Churkin.

Earlier Tuesday, Rose said there were reports of government troops firing mortars at Serb positions from inside the town of Goradze, leading to speculation that the Muslims were trying to provoke a Serb attack on the town.

A U.N. spokesman, Maj. Rob Annink, said later there had been confusion over the report. He said the firing took place southeast of Goradze during fighting between Serb and government forces. He said he had no other details.
